Statement

The e-Institute of International Trade's training and professional development systems are based on prior Training and Development Needs Assessment and do not conflict or compete with national or regional systems. They acknowledge and build on existing training and development systems.

Our consultants provide participants with experiential learning experience where they are able to practice skills that they are taught, thus bridging the 'knowledge-doing gap'.

We review and follow up each participant for a month after a development and enhancement programme has been delivered as a quality assurance measure.

Our consultants are proven to be experienced and competent.
